The University of Notre Dame Australia aims to be an outstanding Australian university, and one of the best Catholic universities in the world. It has a strong commitment to shaping its research culture and performance as guided by its Objects.

Notre Dame supports research activities in all its academic disciplines across campuses in Fremantle and Broome in Western Australia, and Sydney in New South Wales. The University's strategy to build a research community which fosters, supports and increases research activity and quality, includes its endeavours to grow its higher degree by research student population and external collaborative partnerships, achieving enhanced engagement in research and translational research outcomes.

Course Structure

The PhD is a thesis-based research degree. The degree program is individually designed and built around the methodological requirements of the research and the nature of the topic to be investigated, taking into consideration the background of the candidate. The candidate may be asked to undertake further coursework to extend their knowledge and skills as a basis for the research component.

Supervision

All research students are assigned supervisors who are part guide and part adviser in the journey towards the completion of the degree. Before submitting an application please contact the University's Research Office to arrange a discussion with a suitably qualified member of the academic staff.

Modes of Study

Candidates in the PhD program can undertake their research in either a full time or a part time capacity. The maximum time for completion of the Doctor of Philosophy (not including periods of approved leave of absence) will normally be three calendar years for a full time student and six years for a part time student. The minimum time for completion will normally be two years.

Introduction

Characteristics of the PhD program are centred on a thesis that includes a substantial original contribution to knowledge in the form of new knowledge or significant and original adaptation, application and interpretation of existing knowledge. The thesis may be based on a comprehensive critical review of literature, empirical research, creative work or other systematic approach embedded in a field or discipline, and / or may be based on advanced and sustained critical reflection and analysis of professional theory and practice.

Fees & Scholarships

Domestic Students

In accordance with the Higher Education Support Act 2003, domestic research students are eligible to have all Higher Degree by Research (HDR) course fees paid for by the Commonwealth Government under the Research Training Program (RTP) Stipend Scholarship for the length of their degree.

International Students

All international research students are required to pay full fees for the length of their research degree. Please refer to the International Prospectus for current cost per year to complete a Masters degree.

All international students are encouraged to apply for the Endeavour International Postgraduate Research Scholarship (EIPRS) or the University equivalent International Fee Remission Research Scholarship (IFRRS), and the Research Training Program (RTP) Stipend Scholarship.

The EIPRS provides annual fee remission for the successful applicant(s) and meets the cost of a standard Overseas Student Health Cover Policy for the student for the period of the course. The IFRRS covers the annual fee remission for the successful candidate; however students will need to pay for their own Overseas Student Health Cover.

Admission Requirements

The following criteria are required for a student to be admitted to the PhD program:

- Completion of a research Masters degree (by research or course work and thesis), appropriate to the professional field of the applicant (or equivalent) at a high level of achievement; or
- A Bachelor's degree with Honours (Class 1 or Class 2A Honours level or equivalent); or
- In exceptional circumstance, an equivalent academic or professional background that is considered by the Dean of the School and the PVC-R to be an appropriate preparation for independent study and research at a doctoral level.
- An applicant may be required to demonstrate an ability to understand and communicate in both written and spoken English at a level adequate for the purpose of pursuing the program of study or as deemed appropriate by the Dean of the School.
