Register for the ICDE Lillehammer Lifelong Learning Summit in February

Have you ever heard of the 70:20:10 model when discussing learning? The model indicates that 70 % of learning comes from on-the-job experiences, 20 % from informal learning and 10 % from formal education and courses. If only 10 % of the learning in organisations is achieved by formal courses and studies, what is the role of the education sector?

Glenn Ruud, Global Learning and Development Director at Wilhelmsen, will talk about his experience with the 70:20:10 model, and he will challenge the educational sector through his key note presentation on the ICDE Lillehammer Lifelong Learning Summit in February.

Making sure all learners have the same experience is extremely important, especially in online learning. Regardless of the subject matter, the content you're teaching needs to be clear and accessible so all learners are able to grasp and retain the material. During this webinar, you'll learn best practices for incorporating accessibility into courses using SoftChalk Create 11 and the newly revised QM Higher Education Rubric, Sixth Edition. The webinar speakers will also share their experiences with accessibility throughout their careers in education.
