Monthly Research Update

School of Arts &
Sciences

Dear A & S colleagues,

In this issue we welcome on board our new HDR columnist, Marianne Rozario. HDRs, I would particularly take note of the Monday meetup invitation! Some great advice for all of us in Marianne's first column on page 3.

Enjoy the Update!

Marianne's Mouthpiece

Welcome to 'Marianne's Mouthpiece'! A new column, a new HDR Rep! Introductions first – I'm Marianne, a second year PhD candidate in International Relations from the UK. I hope I get to meet you along the postgrad journey. Feel free to drop me an email at marianne.rozario1@my.nd.edu.au to say hi, to share a success or a struggle, or a suggestion to make HDR life at Notre Dame even better!

To kick off 'Marianne's Mouthpiece', I wanted to share with you the '4 Buckets' approach I continue to find useful as a guide to see how I'm going.

1. The Intellectual Bucket – Are you being challenged? Is your brain being stimulated enough? For all of us, I'd hope, our thesis is stimulating us intellectually. However, that doesn't mean this bucket is full. Are you feeling bored of your research? Have you drafted that chapter again and again and simply over it?

Suggestion: Take a day off to read something completely different, just for fun. Fill your mind with some new information. Read that book that you've set aside to 'someday' read.

2. The Spiritual Bucket – How's your faith journey going? How's your prayer life? How are you serving others? Sometimes postgrad life becomes all-consuming – it's important to ensure that our souls are being looked after too.

Suggestion: Take some time to ensure we are being spiritually nourished – go on a retreat, start journaling, listen to podcasts, seek out faith events. Schedule some time to do acts of service – volunteer at a nursing home or a soup kitchen, etc.

3. The Emotional Bucket – How are your relationships with others? When did you last socialise with friends? The postgrad journey will look extremely different for all of us – perhaps you're researching from afar, or it's lonely because you're studying 9-5 from home in front of a screen, or you're juggling a busy family life hoping for an extra hour in the day to research.

Recent articles of interest

David Secher & Surya Raghu, "Knowledge exchange: how should universities engage with business?", THE, 28 February 2019.

Ritesh Chugh & Kenneth Howah, "All taxpayer funded research could soon be free for you, the taxpayer, to read". The Conversation, 29 February 2019.

Suggestion: Take time to form genuine and authentic relationships – have catch-ups with friends, have facetimes with those further away. Remember you're not alone – join us for our weekly 'Monday Meets' from 1.30-2.30pm at the Two Wolves from 1 April!

1. The Physical Bucket – How are your energy levels? Exercised much recently? Used your hands not your minds? Using our minds all the time is the day job for us. It is worthwhile to ensure we balance that out with other activities – sports, arts and crafts, hobbies, etc.

Suggestion – pick up a new hobby, try a new sport, be creative, go back to that interest you let go five years ago.

For me, checking in with my '4 buckets' is helpful. I find it useful to rate each of my 'buckets' as a percentage. This makes me aware of my least-filled 'buckets' and then informs me of what I need to act on.

So, take 15 minutes today and go through your 'buckets'.
