Academic Integrity policy and procedure

The new Academic Integrity policy and procedure apply to:

- staff of the University, including adjuncts and clinical academics
- students of the University (including former students)
- students enrolled in a program or course delivered by a third party
- academic visitors to the University
- anyone who undertakes research on behalf of the University.

The changes introduce new and updated principles and requirements for:

- Education of students and staff about academic integrity and the prevention of academic cheating
- Classifying of levels of academic integrity breach
- Penalties to be applied for breaches considered as student misconduct
- Managing suspected breaches involving contract cheating
- breaches of academic integrity, and
- Monitoring and improving the mitigation of academic integrity risks.

The new policy and procedure replace the rescinded Policy: Academic Integrity (Staff), Policy: Academic Integrity (Students), and Procedure: Managing Breaches of Academic Integrity (Students).

Principles and requirements for maintaining research integrity (responsible research conduct and practice) continue to be defined in the Code of Conduct Research and the Procedure: Managing Potential Breaches of the Code of Conduct Research.

Principles and requirements for staff to manage potential conflicts of interest that relate to maintaining academic integrity are set out in the Staff Code of Conduct.
